To put it plainly, racial bias is taking away money that could be put toward college tuition or a small business. British Journal of Community Justice⁹

Urban minority communities may face environmental racism in the form of park Beatty, C. But by that time, many of the suburban homes that the federal government had subsidized were no longer affordable ; this window of opportunity for economic mobility had closed. Second, we highlight two examples of concrete ongoing interventions to address neighborhood-based disparities, to illustrate how partnerships between public health and other professional communities can be forged to reduce health disparities.
