This project, however, has long been an arena of considerable conflict between city builders and the residents of central Tokyo. The western military is learning.

However, as the tensions at the Altamira summit demonstrated, questioning their position manifests itself through contributions in lectures, courses, as well as published articles and books. On June 1st, exactly four months after the precursory license was issued, Ibama published the concession for the installation license, effectively authorizing the beginning of construction work for the plant. This workgroup manifested the professed interest of the federal government in building the plant and displayed it as a strategic project towards raising the energy supply in the country and as a structural project in the "Amazon Development Axis".
