The author Paul West has for every chapter and thought as he expounds on the subject of mortifying of our sins and flesh provided scripture passages for every thought he expounds on and from scripture shows us the simplicity with which we can overcome. As expressed in a sutta: "When a noble disciple understands what is kammically unwholesome, and the root of unwholesome kamma, what is kammically wholesome, and the root of wholesome kamma, then he has right view.

It answers the design of the Gospel, which all centres in this: that man is to be saved. It is a much needed call to arm our hearts and minds in this present evil world. This way is the Noble Eightfold Path ariya atthangika magga. My family has moved from West Virginia back to Maryland and the busyness that comes with that has me plodding a little slower than usual.

It may indeed put on a religious garb, as did the Pharisees, but beneath this nothing requires to be pointed out that there is a twofold walking or living after the flesh: the one more gross and manifest, the other more indiscernible. When you are weak enough, you will come to see this truth, believe it, and then find your rest.
